Saturday, February 6. 1720.

Vienna, January 24.

THIS year highly sensible of the dangerous Consequences that may attend the Affairs of the Palatinate, particularly after they received the last vigorous Remonstrances made by the Protestant Body at Ratisbon, dated the 22d of December last. When these Representations arrived here, two Couriers were ready to go with certain Dispatches for two of the chief Protestant Courts in the Empire, and another for the Palatine Court, but the former were forthwith countermanded, and the third was some Days after sent to Heidelberg with very strict Orders for that Court to put forthwith without Delay the Affairs of Religion in the Palatinate into their former Condition. Some of the Protestant Ministers demanded Communication of those Orders, but the Imperial Court declined it, giving them to understand, that they did not doubt but the Elector Palatine would speedily comply with the Emperour's Desire, in which case, they would let him have the Satisfaction of having done it as it were of his own Motion; but if contrary to their Expectation he should make any further Delay, they would then make no Difficulty of publishing the said Orders, the Emperour being resolved to exert his Authority as supreme Judge, and to see Justice done to the Protestant Body, in order to convince the World, that his Imperial Majesty does not approve of what has been done. It is to be observed, that the first Letter which the Emperour sent to the Elector Palatine to dissuade him from his Proceedings against his Protestant Subjects, was not communicated to any of the Ministers of the Protestant Powers and States of the Empire; but it being reported that one of the Minutes contained in it, for dissuading the Elector, was, that those Measures were de tempore, (un-timely) a certain Minister of a Foreign Power inquired of the Imperial Ministry whether it was true that the said Expression was made use of, which would imply a tacit Approbation of what the Protestants complained of; but he was assured that the said Report was ill-grounded. However this Affair is now looked upon here as very serious and of the highest Consequence, considering the present Conjunctures in Europe, and the Unanimity of the Protestants, whose Measures for supporting their common Cause is earnestly seconded even by the Saxon Ministers here and at Ratisbon, contrary to what the Roman Catholicks seemed to expect from that Court. It is even said, that the late Empress Mother laid these Circumstances so much to Heart, that the Grief she conceived at it, might possibly have accelerated her Death, which has caused great Conternation at the Electoral Court of Heidelberg, where her late Majesty's Advices against Innovations in Religion did not produce the Effect she had expected; it is very likely the Disgrace of these rash Proceedings will fall upon the Elector's Councillours, who put him upon Attempts which if not soon redressed, may disturb the Tranquility of the Empire, and imbroil him with Powers whose Friendship ought to be dear at this Juncture to the Emperour and himself.

Warsaw, Jan. 26. On the 18th and 19th Instant, the Committees for inspecting the Accounts of the two Treasurers and for restoring the Administration of Justice to its due Course and rectifying the Abuses committed in the several Tribunals of the Republick were sitting, for which Reason the Sessions in the Lower House were suspended for those two Days. In the last Assembly held in the Hall of the Senate, the King being on the Throne, the Lower House being called up and having joined with the Senate, it gave their unanimous Palatine of Dr. Ingolf and Salvo to carry them to the publick, with O'ale to 1000000 Roubles. Resolved, in case the Elector did not fulfil their Demands, to send him a Supply of Damages and Extractions commensurate with the Forces during so many Years in the Territories of the Republick, and to declare War against him. Pursuant to which Resolution the Assembly further unanimously resolved to augment the Army of the Crown and of Lithuania, for which Expence a Tax should be laid on the Subjects of the Republick. Several of the Deputies of the Lower House having moved in one of their late Sessions, that the Clergy ought to contribute equally with the Nobility and other Orders of the Republick towards the Expenditure requisite for the Defence of their Country, it was then proposed to send a Deputation to the Archbishop of Gnesna, Primate of the Kingdom, to deliberate with him on the Ways and Means for raising a Supply on the Clergy, and it was agreed in that Conference that the Clergy should pay a Contribution or free Gift to be raised on them by way of Capitation, according to the Revenue of their Benefices; this Resolution of the Clergy being communicated to the General Assembly of the States, it was approved by them. Since the 20th the Lower House have met every Day, but so many and different things were moved and excepted against by several of the Deputies, about which it was thought were already sufficiently discussed, even to the satisfaction of all their Marshal at last declared, that unless there would be unanimity in their Deliberations and he at His the pressing Circumstances of the State, it was in no purpose to hold a Diet. This had the good Effect that the greater part of the Deputies proposed, that seeing the usual Term of a Diet was near expiring they ought only to deliberate on the most necessary Points; but others persisting in raising still more Difficulties, the Marshal adjourned the Session till To-morrow, when it is believed they will join with the Senate, in order to prolong the Session for a Week more, his Majesty being willing speedily to set out for Dresden. The Session began this Day to hear private Causes.
